

W. LEE HILL LOCO COMPANY GET LOWLANDS

Boucher Relates Inside History of Legislation of 1905 and Repeal of 1907—Buckingham Cheered Again and Again at Great Rally in Eagles' Hall.

The most enthusiastic rally of the campaign was held at Eagles' hall last night, when the crowd which filled all of the chairs on the main floor and in the gallery, cheered the candidates to the echo. Edward T. Buckingham, candidate for Mayor, had to wait several minutes before he was allowed to proceed with his remarks. When he played the present administration, members of the Republican party rose in the audience and joined the cheering. Mr. Buckingham's speech was confined last night wholly to the maladministration of affairs by the corporation servers who first captured the Republican party and then turned the city over to the New Haven road. All of the candidates were at their best. Stephen P. Boucher, who is running on his record, made a speech that was the best he ever delivered. Boucher is going ahead at great strides and if the campaign was a week longer he would alone place enough evidence in the hands of the people to warrant them in feeling that it was every man who goes to the General Assembly stands upon a platform and abides by that platform.

John M. Griffin was the chairman of the meeting. William Thomas, candidate for town clerk, received a wonderful ovation. The din of the applause was second only to the cheering for the head of the ticket. It was a refutation of the insinuations that have been made because of the fact that the candidate has only one leg. Men wore pictures of the popular Alderman from the Eighth in their hats. Harry P. Porter, who was one of the speakers, said that even if William Thomas had only one leg that he had more than the present administration had in advocating its being retained in power.

Among the many things said by Mr. Boucher in his address last night were:

"If a young man wants to accomplish anything in assistance in the government of his city, State or country he must be one of the big parties. He must fight for what is clean in that party and then work for the success of the party on election day."

"I am a Democrat because it is the party that recognizes merit among the people who work for a living and because every man, no matter how much or how little money he has got has an equal say in the Democratic party. It is the party that endeavors to build from the bottom with a foundation among the masses, and it is because of these fundamental principles of true citizenship laid down by the Democratic party that I am in the ranks of the party."

"When at Hartford, representing this city, my guide in performing my duties were the principles of the Democratic platform. I challenge openly an investigation of my every action while in the Legislature. If I had been in conformity with the platform of the party I will stand convicted on my own challenge."

"The convention which nominated the opposing ticket was allowed to nominate only men standing for corporate interests. They would not allow any man of liberal tendencies to be recognized. There were men in the last Republican convention who wanted to nominate either Arnold or Morris, but they worked to keep them out and they were bound to the corporate interests."

"Those in control of the situation on the other side won't give the delegates of the people in their own party the right to vote for whom they want and it now behooves all of the people of this city to take a stand to see that they get government by the people and for the people."

"Mayor Lee made an issue of tax equalization. He was going to raise the valuation of all property so that all values would compare favorably. He was going to put the burden of taxation where it belonged and bring down the tax rate. But what has he done? He has not only raised the rate but he has raised the valuation. The taxation against the reality of the small home owner has always been full, but by the tax equalization of Mayor Lee they have been raised still more until they bear five-eighths of the tax burden about the city. Why has not the valuation of the property of the corporations also been raised in order that they should pay a fair share of the cost of running the city?"

"The city government of Bridgeport, from an executive standpoint, is in the most chaotic state it has been during its history."

"There was a personal attack on me in the Standard last night. It said that I did not save Seaside Park and had a little humor along with it to the effect that I helped Washington cross the Delaware. We all appreciated the joke, but getting down to business, let us ask, When was Seaside Park in danger? I will tell you. In 1905 when Allan W. Paige was the chief mogul of the General Assembly when Marcus L. Reynolds and his substitute, Henry Lee, were in the Legislature, the Locomobile Company, which owns a plant adjoining Seaside Park was given a grant of 65 acres of lowlands off Seaside Park which they could fill in and so spoil the beauty of Seaside Park for all time. No one paid an attention. My only answer to them tonight is to say that they tried to equalize them and they have got the highest tax rate on the largest grant list in the history of the city, and the homes of the city paying most of the bills."

The last speaker of the evening was Attorney W. W. Bent, a progressive young Democrat, a staunch supporter of all the principles laid down in the city platform. He told how important it was for the city to raise money properly and equitably and even as important was it to see that Buckingham and every Democratic alderman was elected with him in order to carry out the reforms promised as speedily as possible.

The Criterion quartette was present and was a great hit with the gathering. The singers had a number of new songs.

BURPEE SUSTAINS COMMISSIONERS IN TWO APPEALS

Judge Lucius F. Burpee in the Superior Court has handed down decisions in three appeal cases from the decision of the County Commissioners, granting one appeal and refusing two. All the parties interested hail from Norwalk. The court overrules the decision of the Commissioners in the appeal of James F. Layden, 208 East Washington avenue in Norwalk. The court says that the applicant is suitable and saw that the place all right.

The court sustained the Commissioners in the appeal of Lodovico Giordano. The applicant asked for a renewal of his license at the South Norwalk approach to the Washington bridge, which connects East and South Norwalk. And also in the appeal of Annie McDonald of 45 Chapel street, Norwalk. This application was objected to on the ground that the place was unsatisfactorily polluted.
